Ask Captain CurmudgeonDear Captain Curmudgeon,*

Editor's Note: You may send questions to Capt. Curmudgeon care of the editor. He may or may not answer them.

Dear Capt. Curmudgeon,

Scuttlebutt around the Clubhouse is that you are a bum and a son of gun. What say ye?

Signed, Anonymous New MemberDear A.N.M.

That would be fighting words to most - but not to me. Scuttlebutt is a term for gossip and rumor which comes from an early 19th century nautical term for an open cask of water kept on deck for use by the crew. Scuttle (to cut a hole in) + butt (a large cask). The sailors would gather about the cask and trade stories, much like ye office workers do at the water cooler. But if any of those swabbies ever called the Captain a "Son of a Gun," they wouldn't be gossiping.

Back in the good ole days of the big sailboats, women, wives, mistresses, and yes, even prostitutes, were frequently on board ship when in port or in home waters. And yes, rarely, okay, occasionally, alright, it happened pretty often, and so, of course children would be born aboard ship. Common sailors and their women (when on board) slept on the gun deck. If a child were born on board, it would likely be born on the gun deck. If male, such a child of the common sailors was referred to as a "son of a gun." If anyone called me a "son of a gun," my mom would just kick em with her peg leg.

The term "Bum" may come from the small boats used to bring provisions out to the Ship anchored in a port. The supplies were hoisted and lowered using a boom (from the old German "buom" meaning tree). English corruption of the term made the small boats "bum boats," as well as any small boats, even those carrying goods for sale to the sailors. The occupants of these boats begging from ship to ship were called "Bums" even when they walked around on shore. Which why they always referred to me mom's leg as a "bum leg".
